

Tribute To Our Boys

To our boys who crossed the wide Atlantic and to all who were ready to jeopardize their lives to uphold American ideals and institutions, we cannot offer enough praise and honor.

You left your homes to fight and, if need be, to die for our country's honor, for right, for humanity and for justice. Whether you fought in the Argonne, at Verdun, on the sea, or were with the eager waiting lines, the nation and this school may well be proud. Not one of you can be found who will boast of your achievements or your bravery, exemplifying the finest record of modesty and manhood the world has ever seen.

We feel sure that you who have seen your comrades falling around you, while you will do all in your power to avert another such struggle, will in all instances stand by America first, last and forever.

We bow our heads to our wounded soldiers. We rejoice with them that they played their parts so well and that they now wear their honor marks so bravely.

If the boys who died for this cause were here, we could better tell them the feeling in our hearts. The nation and the whole world will never forget the fifty thousand Americans who so gallantly gave their lives that this nation, under God, shall not die, but shall forever enjoy the fruits of progress and prosperity that their sacrifice has made possible.

Americans, your deeds will forever brighten the pages of history!
