

FOREWORD

The 1921 Red River Aggie has passed through a number of stages. It is characteristic of plant growth that there must be a resting stage. The Aggie's resting stage overran a little this year, but through the helpful cooperation of many forces the cycle is completed and the work is finished.

The 1921 Aggie is modest and unassuming. Its purpose is to show northwestern Minnesota folks that there is a real institution in the Red River Valley that has built and is building up men and women who have noble aspirations and high ideals. We as students are proud of the agricultural resources of this section of the state. At this school we have tried to master the principles that will bring us success on our farms and a finer appreciation of life's values in our homes.

Through the Aggie we salute you. Be lenient in your criticisms of the shortcomings you will find. We have done our best.
