

THE RED RIVER AGGIE

laboratory, dormitory, recitation hall and everything else. At one time it is told that the dining hall was located on the first floor of Stephens Hall. Must have been convenient for the boys in Stephens Hall.

The students used to be as interested in athletics as they are now, the first football team was conceited enough to have its picture taken and this is now in the museum. Queer lot of fellows, if it is a real picture. Wonder if we'll look the same when we begin talking about the "old days." One on that team was tackled 3 yards from the line when he had gotten the ball and was running towards his own goal line. Basketball was the chief sport and from the stories told some uncanny plays were made and exceptional players composed the teams. Some of the super-stars were Harry Hedin, Anchor Wurden, Fossbakken Bros., Albert Malm, Edward Johnson, William Street, Silas Torvend, Landby Bros., Elmer Saterstrom, Norris Johnson, "Big Bill" Osterloh, and a lot of them.

Evidently school days are among the best days we have and they are the more appreciated the further we are from them. If alumni and former students can tell their stories and recite the good times they used to have when the school was small and facilities limited, how much more will we not appreciate the advantages we have in comparison. So here's to the alumni and the days "way back," may they always cherish and revere the old days and may we in turn be as proud and loyal to the "Old School" as they are and as they have been.
