

To the Class of 1925:

August first of this year will mark the end of the third decade since the Northwest Station was established, and the nineteenth year since the Northwest School was set up. During these thirty years the erstwhile "duck pond," premeditatedly selected to provide land for drainage investigations, has been transformed into an efficient investigational center and its researches have delved into and solved many important problems.

During these nineteen years of the Northwest School, over two thousand young men and women have here received training and inspiration for their life's work. Over six hundred have completed courses which set a standard.

Now you join the ranks of alumni. You take with you the love and respect of the faculty and the affectionate regard of your fellow students.

You have made a splendid record at the Northwest School.

May your future be blessed with a full measure of joy and happiness, and your life be marked with a record of unselfish service.

My best wishes go with you.

Sincerely yours,

C. G. Selvig

February 7, 1925.