

To the Class of 1926:

Time speeds on. The school's twentieth year will soon come to a close. Two decades of service for and with two thousand Red River Valley young people will soon be an accomplished realization.

Four words and the thoughts that they embrace, I would like to leave with you. First, Intelligence. This is the need of this day and generation. In school here, you have striven to attain that goal. Second, Tolerance. 'Mid the passions and emotional activities of our complex civilization, this word carries with it what is needed upon every side. Third, Fraternity. The Golden Rule and Christ's teaching are embraced within the meanings of this word. Without brotherly love, we shall not reach far on our paths of service. Fourth, Peace. The ultimate in our national and international existence. It can only come as we will it, based on intelligence, toleration and with a fraternal feeling toward our fellowmen.

May you all realize your own cherished hopes and ambitions, is the sincere wish of

Your friend,

C. G. Selvig

Superintendent of the Northwest School and Station.

Our Superintendent

IT IS peculiarly fitting in an historical and anniversary number of the Aggie to summarize the achievements of Superintendent C. G. Selvig. To those whose vision made possible the beginning of the Northwest School and Station, all credit is due. The institution having been started, however, its success or failure depended primarily upon those who were to develop it. Of the three superintendents appointed, Mr. Selvig has served the longest and has been most responsible for the growth made.

Mr. Selvig came to the Northwest School and Station as superintendent in 1910. Under his regime, the school has increased from 101 to 300; the school buildings from two to nine; the farm from a liability because of poor drainage to an asset representing an income of $21,000 in 1924. The Winter Shows, begun by Mr. Selvig as a small show in one school room, now requires two acres of floor space for its accommodation and attracts visitors of national prominence. The extension work of the school reaches into all corners of the Valley and the campus is a beauty spot of the Northwest.

Dedicating this Aggie to Willett M. Hays, we, the editors and Class of 1926, believe his faith and trust have been well founded in those who have carried on.
