

blest them with such a plentiful and prosperous year. They also met with the good dinner in mind, especially the roast turkey.

The result was, that very little was eaten for supper.

A very pleasing program was given in the afternoon. After supper, a party was held in the school cafeteria, and a dance in the school gymnasium, where every one enjoyed a very good time.

Assemblies

ONE THING which the Northwest School students are very fortunate in, is to be able to get together three different periods a week in the Auditorium and listen to some very interesting as well as educational programs. These programs are put on by students of the school, people from down town, and sometimes people from other towns and communities. This last year we have been favored by having some programs which have made the students forget all their worries and give themselves up to the entertainment of the moment. The concert put on by Mr. Chesterman with the Orthophonic Victrola was one which the students enjoyed very much. Just before the Christmas Holidays, Mr. Thorson, postmaster of Crookston, came out with the big poster "Mail Christmas packages now." He explained to us the fundamentals of the post office department. One who will long remain in the minds of the Northwest School students as a humorous talker is Ex-Congressman Adam Bede.

It is something out of the ordinary when the noon-day meal comes too soon, but that is what happened when the Crookston Five put on a concert for the students and faculty. The whole body was swaying about as if in a cloud when all at once they were brought down to earth and told that their dinner was waiting for them. Many other good programs have been put on, but they are too numerous to mention here.

Programs like those mentioned which are put on during the week days, refresh the student's mind and add interest to his school work. It is hoped that the variety and class of programs put on this year will be continued as the years go by.

Junior-Senior Banquet

THE annual Junior-Senior Banquet held March 1 was carried out with an historical idea in mind. The quartette made up of Juniors represented some "old timers" who brought back memories of the earlier struggles of the school, and of classmates now scattered all over the globe. Toasts were given by the Senior and Junior presidents, and Mr. Selvig, and a one-act play entitled "The Murder of Miss English Language" was presented by a group of Juniors. The banquet was held in the dining-hall which was decorated with green and white, the Junior class colors, and the main program was given in the auditorium. The General Arrangements Committee consisted of Carl Widseth, chairman, Melvin Hole, Gladys Huartson, Vivian Olson, Elmer Hedstrand, and Dorothy Chandler.
