Music at the Northwest School is important not only for its aesthetic value but because of the natural and spontaneous enthusiasm among the students themselves. There is opportunity for natural talent to display itself in band, orchestra, chorus, and glee clubs, and individually in piano, violin, or voice.

At many schools music has been raised to such a standard that it is considered as great honor to be a member of the school chorus as it is to be a member of the football team. The Northwest School will soon be one of these if the interest and enthusiasm for music continues to grow as it has in the past.
