A business course in the school offers abundant room for the exercise of a student's highest intellectual power and of every good quality in human nature. No matter what occupation one may follow, he is a business man and must keep his mind open to the influences that makes for human progress and social betterment.

At the Northwest School the business subjects taught are Shorthand (Gregg), Typewriting, Bookkeeping, English, Spelling, Commercial Law, and other subjects which offer a means in which to become better acquainted with the problems of every day life.
