

Our associations with you, Class of 1929, are at an end. Now we must bid you farewell. The friendships formed with you we will take with us through life. Remember that real life is found in love, laughter, and work. Wherever you go, may you carry with you that same spirit of loyalty and honesty that has characterized your work here. Your success will lie, not in achieving what you aim at, but in aiming at what you ought to achieve. So our great hope is that you will always aim at the highest and best in life. May you always be frank, natural, clean in mind and body, and ready to face any obstacle and meet every difficulty, unabashed and unafraid.

Sincerely yours,
Retta Bede
