

Weaver, Stephenson, Covlin.

Dramatics

THE play's the thing," said Shakespere, and at the Northwest School we hear the echo, "The play's the thing." We are all interested in dramatics and most students who wish to participate in a play, may do so at sometime during the year in connection with either class room work, under the English Department, or with literary societies. The presentation of two major performances, however, has come to be a tradition. Each year, on Thanksgiving day, a one act play is presented while during the second semester the senior class play is the outstanding dramatic event of the school season. This year the Thanksgiving play was "A Maker of Dreams," a fantasy. The characters were John Covlin as the manufacturer and Lloyd Weaver and Hazel Stephenson as Pierrot and Pierrette, respectively. The latter two represented the people who are unhappy and discontented until they find true love. The play was given in excellent manner and was appreciated by the audience.

"The Show-Off" by Kelly, was chosen as the senior class play. The plot concerns a young man who believes that the way to gain success is to suggest it. The impression he creates is not always favorable, but his motto is, "Sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof," and he does not worry about the future. All his wife's relatives are much concerned, but through it all his own Amy insists that Aubrey is simply wonderful.

The dramatic productions have been under the direction of Miss Anne Simley, of the English Department.