Basketball reigns supreme as a sport at the Northwest School. The call for material from Coach R. J. Christgau, found a squad of fifty players who responded. Among them were four lettermen from last year's first squad, but selecting the main squad was a task. In Captain Tom Cain the Aggies have a real leader and player. His basket shooting ability and clever floor work stamp him as a star. Tom is not alone in the production of field goals. Harold Cordes, with his lithe and graceful movements is responsible for many of the Aggie points. Elmer Johnson, the speedy running guard, is poison to the sharpshooters of the enemy. Needless to say Cordes and Johnson will be missed next year. Silas Hviding, Harold Nelson and Kenneth Avery are Juniors who are developing into speedy and aggressive players. Stanton Gandrud and Clarence Carlson are upper classmen who carry on for the Aggies in time of need.

The games played this season, so far, were very exciting. The Bemidji game which ended by a close score was one of the thrilling games played on the home floor. The rivalry between the West Central School at Morris, Minn., and the Northwest School is traditional. The two games at Crookston with the West Central School closed the 1930 season, and these two games gave Crookston Aggie students the most exhilarating, speedy, spectacular and victorious games of the season.
