DRAMATICS

More time is all we lack for dramatic activity. We're always sure of an audience, and there is an increasing number of people who enjoy taking part in plays.

Much dramatization of literature as a part of class work is responsible in part for the interest and assurance evident when try-outs are announced.

"The Sausage," a German Folk play, with Richard Johanson, Jerome Molecck, and Emory KenKnight in the cast, pleased the parents on November 5.

On Thanksgiving "The Wonder Hat" was given. Harold Sanden, Frances McKibbin, Esther Hango, Orville Hovelson and Willard Kimmel were the cast. The play was repeated at the last women's program of the Winter Shows, and again at the short course in Warren on February 17.

A setting of soft fire light and candle glow was in keeping with the Christmas play, "The Beau of Bath," in which Edwin Myers, Harriet Severson and William Sitko had roles.

The above picture is the cast on the night of the performance of "A Midsummer Night's Dream," the last year's senior play.

The settings and most of the costumes were planned and made by the students as a part of their dramatic work.

The radio and the moving picture are stimulating an interest and widening the appreciation for plays. Few students who attend the Northwest School are denied a chance to partake in dramatics if they choose.
