

Red River Aggie

EDWIN WIDSETH
McIntosh
Captain, Fullback

Playing his fourth season in a Northwest School uniform, Captain Widseth finished his Aggie athletic career in a blaze of glory by leading his teammates to their third consecutive conference title. "Tiny" was the hardest hitting fullback ever developed at the Northwest School and ranked as one of the greatest high school fullbacks in the northwest section of the state.

MERVIN HAGEN,
Underwood
Quarterback

Displaying cool field generalship, "Tango" was invaluable to the team. A knee injury in mid-season prevented his playing full games in the Morris and Grand Rapids contests, but he was inserted into the lineup at crucial moments in the game to help put over the winning touchdowns. "Tango" closed his football career in the 1933 season after three years of service.

KERMIT GREENLEY
Viking
Halfback

As the blocking halfback, "Stub" cleared the path for the ball carriers in their sensational end runs and off-tackle smashes. "Stub" always got his men, and when called upon to carry the ball, never failed to add some yardage. His play throughout the season was consistently brilliant.

LLEWELLYN REESE
Park Rapids
Captain-elect, 1934
Halfback

One of the fastest men on the squad, Reese was a great scoring threat. His sensational end-runs thrilled spectators. Aggie rooters are looking forward to a continuation of his excellent play next season when he will lead his mates in the attempt to bring the fourth consecutive football championship to the school.

ARNOLD STRAND, Twin Valley
Tackle

The "big little man" of the squad, "Fat" was invulnerable on the line. His brilliant work during his three seasons of football has contributed much towards bringing three consecutive conference championships to the Northwest School.

ERLING STRAND, Twin Valley
Tackle

When a tackle had to be taken out of the line to lead the interference, Erling was given the assignment and performed his duty to perfection. Defensively he was a tower of strength and the opponents learned early in the game to avoid his side of the line.

RUSSELL STAVE, Bagley
End

In his first year as a regular, Stave scintillated at the end post. His speed in going down the field under passes resulted in many touchdowns. Being one of the most agile men on the squad, Russell broke up play after play.

ALVIN GRONNER, Underwood
End

"Governor" was one of the most important cogs on the championship team. Defensively he broke up play after play on his side of the line, while offensively he contributed many touchdowns with his brilliant catches of forward passes. The 1933 season closed his football career at the school after two years of service.

WALTER DORSETH, Twin Valley
Tackle

When an off-tackle smash was to be executed, Dorseth never failed to do his bit to make the play work. Offensively and defensively he was always dependable and reliable. He closes his athletic career after two years of service.

CLARENCE WECKWERTH, Hazel
Tackle

Playing his first year as a regular, Weckwerth performed in a most creditable manner. His 1933 performance under fire showed that he will be a big factor in the 1934 campaign. Big things are expected of him.

NOEL HANSEN, Detroit Lakes
Tackle

The only freshman regular on the team, Hansen showed that he will be an important cog in future Northwest School football teams. His aggressiveness on the line smeared up many of the opponents' plays and contributed much to the success of the team.

CRIN REFLING, Fertile
Tackle, Center

Alternating between tackle and center, "Ref" was an important factor in the team's success. Offensively he did his share to open holes for the ball carriers, while defensively he was a "stone wall".

RALPH RISBRUDT
Dalton
Half-back

Risbrudt was given his first chance in the Grand Rapids game and came through with flying colors. He followed up that brilliant performance with a most spectacular performance against Morris. His line smashing and ball carrying ability has earned him the monicker of "Crasher". He will have two more seasons of football and is expected to continue his dazzling play.

RALPH SHELDON
Bagley
Half-Back

"Shotgun" started the season at end but was shifted to a half-back post where he played an excellent game until illness forced him out of the games. With two more seasons to play, "Shotgun" promises to be an important factor.

WILLARD KIMMEL
Fergus Falls
Quarterback

"Curley" was a newcomer to the school this year and fitted into the scheme of things nicely. He performed at quarterback, halfback, and end. He is expected to repeat his consistent play next season.

NILS STENBORG
Clearbrook
Center

Nils was in every play, opening up holes for his mates, smearing the enemy rushes, stopping their plunges. His work in the center of the line was consistently good. The 1933 season closes his football career.
