MENTAL MEANDERINGS

Miss Warne, after having lectured on Emerson's appearance before the Phi Beta Kappa Society at Harvard: "Arnold, who was Emerson's audience?"

Arnold Strand: "The 'P and Q's' of Harvard."

Carmen Eeg: "Great Scott! I've forgotten who wrote 'Ivanhoe'."

Archie Northrup: "Yah, and I read for book report 'The Tale of Two Cities' and I can't remember who the Dickens wrote it."

Mr. McCall: When is the best time for gathering apples?

Alvin Gronner: When the farmer's in bed and his dog's tied up.

Mr. Wight (in chemistry class): "A man was worried because scientists say that in 90,000 years the earth will be too cold to sustain life."

Peter Tandberg: "Well, he might be in a warmer place by that time."

Mr. Clark (registering a new student): "What are you?"

New Student: "I'm a Senior."

Mr. Clark (seeing Arthur Anderson): "What are you?"

Arthur Anderson: "I'm a Swede."

Toots: "Beatrice, I want you to meet my girl friend, Miss Belle."

Beatrice: "Oh, that's all right, don't mention it."

Rose, reading her theme: "I trembled with fright, my body was covered with gooseflesh."

Miss W.: "Cyrus, is there anything to add to that?"

Cyrus: "Goose feathers."

Harriet (at Aggie Board): "Do these papers have to go through Clarence?"

Ed Widseth, reading Goldsmith's life: "And the next morning his friends found him under the bed—(pause) ticking to keep warm." (Ed hesitates and inquires, "ticking to keep warm?") and the class roars.

Miss Weinberger, busy on the annual: "May we have your picture?"

Mr. Hollander: "Where do you want it?"

Miss W.: "Under the heading, Animal Husbandry."

Mr. Dowell, in assembly, telling of vacation sicknesses: "Mr. Mlinar is improving and the baby is doing fine."

Mr. Clark, (appearing late at assembly)—"You'll have to pardon me, I couldn't find my hair brush."

Mr. Wight (in civics class): Who should be interested in the weather forecasts?

Mervin (just waking from his nap): The weather bureau.
