

RAISE LIVESTOCK

The farming community that is prosperous is the farming community that is raising livestock. Look back to the older sections of the country, and this is very apparent.

Livestock development should be brought about gradually and sanely. It should be started in a reasonably small way on each and every farm. A few hogs, a few cattle, some poultry tried out and numbers increased as experience grows. This is the development that will bring permanent and lasting prosperity to this section.

This Company is contributing its share to this development by furnishing a market for any and all food animals.

We believe without question the livestock producer of this section knows that this market nets him more than the eastern markets, when he considers freight charges, shrinkage and adherent commission and other charges prevailing at other markets further east and south.
