

As One Editor to Another:

To you, Wallace Abbott; to you, Richard Holmgren; to you, Willard Kimmel; the editors whom I have had the pleasure of knowing personally, and to the other preceding editors of the "Red River Aggie," I wish to extend a hearty greeting. You have all, along with your advisers and trustworthy staff members, worked long hours on your particular annuals, hoping, working, praying that your annual would be just a little bit more than the ones before you. This feeling I believe we all have had at some time or other. It is everyone's prerogative to try to be just a little bit better than someone else and to make his work last longer in the hearts and minds of his fellowmen.

I, working under a pair of wonderful advisers and with an excellent group of staff members, have also experienced such a feeling. It is just another feeling of class competition, the one thing that keeps up the great spirit of the Northwest School. We have hoped and we have worked and we have prayed that this, our annual, would be "just a little bit more." If it is or if it is not, it is of little difference, perhaps. After it is all over we sit back and watch another class struggle over the same problems that so greatly perplexed us. Still we hope that as we give to our schoolmates this, our yearbook, that it will meet with as much praise as did the Aggies that have been published before it. We hope that it will be an inspiration to the Class of '36.

To you, the editors who are to follow, I give this challenge: When you begin your annual, begin with that same enthusiastic school spirit that has seen you through football games, basketball games, song contests and debates. If you do this you are bound to succeed with your publication also.

NOEL HANSON.
