R. J. Christgau completed his ninth season as athletic coach at the school. His 1937 football edition was typical of other Christgau-coached teams... hard, clean fighters, playing the game every single minute... feared by all opponents... tackling a difficult schedule.

Ray Carlson—Tackle. His great playing helped bring us the championship. He was a stone wall on defense. This was his second and final season with the Aggies.

Morris Dahl—Halfback. A sensational line plunger who gained much yardage for the Aggies. By his hard and clean fighting he finished his third season in a blaze of glory.

Ray Higgin—Quarterback. This was Ray's third year as field general. He used very good judgment in calling plays. His detection of the enemy weaknesses made him an important asset.

Lester Knutson—Guard. A two-year man who was an important part of that formidable Aggie line. The opposition experienced considerable difficulty getting by him.

Robert Sunderland—End. Not only a great defensive man but possessing great ability in snaring passes which led to Aggie touchdowns. His first year on the Aggie team.

Oray Tangen—End. A great little man who filled a tough position. A game fighter from opening whistle to end of the game. One more year of service lies ahead for him.
