

Captain Woodrow Evans led the 1937 Aggies to a championship. As third year man he closed his football career in brilliant style. His leadership was an inspiration to his teammates. As a fullback he ranks as one of the greatest in Northwest School history.

Verne Dahlgren—Center. A second year man who was one of those roving snapper-backs that you often hear about but seldom see in action. His second and final season as an Aggie.

Ervie Prenevost—Halfback. A shifty backfield man whose end runs and off-tackle plunges contributed a great deal toward a successful Aggie season. His first year as an Aggie.

Loyal Harris—Guard. He was a hard fighting, hard charging lineman in every game. In that strong Aggie forward wall he was an important link. One year of service is ahead.

Tilford Strand—Tackle. His dauntless courage and his ability to keep in front of every play made him an important cog. A two year man, he closed his career in the 1937 season.

Ardon Hanson—Student Manager. He was responsible for keeping the team in condition during the playing season. His work was an important contribution to the team's success.
