To the Seniors of 1944:

It is with mingled regret and pride that we greet you—regret that our associations with many of you will upon the day of your commencement cease, pride in the knowledge of your achievements and the realization of your potentialities. You have dedicated this book to the men and women of the Northwest School who are serving in the armed forces of our country. May that dedication become so deeply instilled in your thoughts that it will guide your efforts with unfaltering zeal toward the fulfillment of that high idealism for which we strive. Fidelity of heart, firmness of purpose, integrity of spirit—these are the attributes with which the full life is imbued. As you embark upon your various careers, our thoughts go with you. We are confident that you will meet the demands of this rapidly changing world with assurance and courage.
