

Parents' Day

1. Second generation students of NWSA and their parents.
2. Parents busily admiring exhibits in the gym.

It has been a tradition of long standing at the Northwest School that one day of each year is set aside to be spent with our parents. It is on this day that we try to show our appreciation to those who have made our education here possible. This year, despite the gas and rubber shortage, there was a very large attendance of parents at the school.

During the forenoon students served as guides to show our parents and friends around the campus. After the noon-day dinner in the dining hall, the parents held their annual meeting of the Northwest School Parents' Association. V. M. Gibbons of Crookston was elected president, Mark McGovern of St. Vincent, vice president, and Darragh Geddes of East Grand Forks, secretary-treasurer of the organization for the ensuing year.

At two o'clock a program was presented in the auditorium, Miss Hanson led the paradsters in three snappy band numbers. After Donald Boutain's welcome speech, the Home-Ec department featured a home project demonstration; Erwin Muzzy demonstrated the art of welding; and Delores Hamre and Evangeline Hallstrom played a group of two piano numbers. A comic feature of the program was a skit, The Pot Boilers, put on by members of the advanced class to show what they had accomplished in Play Production.

After the program, the parents were guests of students and faculty at the coffee hour in the gymnasium. There they had the opportunity of seeing some of the home project work done by their boys and girls. We feel that this Parents' Day was highly successful and are looking forward to the time when we may again play the role of host and hostess to our parents at our campus home.
