With the resignation of Mr. Harry Ruese, the 1943 football team was again under the guidance of a new coach. They started the season with hardly any practice, but Mr. Baldwin, the new permanent coach, soon rallied his team into a fighting, winning group. The team made a good standing against Crookston Central and the Cathedral, although in both games they were defeated. This year, as last, the Northwest Aggies were Conference Champs. They went to Morris determined to bring back with them "Ossie" the pig, our victory symbol. By defeating Morris, the Crookston Aggies won both Ossie and the State Conference Football Championship for 1943.
