

Senior Day

1. Presentation of 1943 Aggie

The auspicious Senior Class of 1943 started celebrating the traditional events of Senior Day at 6:00 A. M. by going over to Stephens Hall and tipping over all the recumbent Freshmen and Junior boys' beds. From there things went from bad to worse. A rousing, sousing water fight ensued, leaving the drenched rats of Stephens Hall the losers. But revenge came soon when they tipped over the sleigh in which the Seniors were riding around the campus. Here again, however, the superiority of the egotistical Seniors asserted itself, and they recovered themselves and went to breakfast.

The dining hall was decorated for the occasion, and the Seniors, arrayed in their picturesque costumes gave the meal a festive touch.

They were free from classes all day to come and go as they pleased. At assembly they marched in to the tune of "Grand March." Their president, Bob Phillips, gave a farewell address, and the classes went through the ritual of reading the class will and then exchanging seats in the auditorium.
