The basketball squad met again this year with prospects for a promising season ahead of them. Ninety boys turned out for the sport of which five were lettermen: Peterson, Price, Scholin, Mykleby, and Brandt.

In our first four games, the team was strengthened immeasurably by the addition of Bob Selberg, towering cager formerly of Crookston Central High School. When Bob left for the army, the team slumped momentarily, but was borne up again by Captain Glen Holmquist, who returned to school in January after a semester's absence. The team has also benefited by the reassuring presence of John Johnson, ace ball handler transferred from Strandquist.

The largest share of the credit for the team's skill and sportsmanship must go to Herschel Lysaker, our new coach and athletic director. Under his capable piloting, the team has set up an outstanding precedent for the coming years.
