October 14

The Aggies opened their football season with a very brief period of practice, a largely inexperienced team but with a spirited enthusiasm and will to play good football that made it a game well worth seeing. Their first opposition was the Crookston Cathedral team. The score stood in Cathedral's favor but our boys played a good, hard game.

October 20

East Grand Forks was host to the Aggies in a night game. Although the game was lost due mainly to poor ball handling, the team otherwise showed an improvement.

October 24

The Aggies played a great, winning game on the home field. Warren's otherwise creditable team perhaps was lacking in experience to overcome the proficiency that our team was beginning to acquire with more practice and able coaching.

October 27

Homecoming! The great day in football! The traditional Crookston Aggies vs. Morris Aggies homecoming game was played on our own field. October outdid herself in making this the most golden, bright blue and mellow October day that the festive, cheering audience had ever seen. The state conference championship and the familiar, highly-prized trophy of "Ossie" was at stake so each team played with a will to win. The team with the somewhat superior football technique and the greater will to win were the victors and our Aggies bore both trophies with sportsmanlike triumph.

November 3

The last game of the season was also, perhaps, the most difficult one. The Aggies settled down with determination to play a hard-fighting, fast-moving game against Crookston Central High. The game was played before a large, patriotic crowd on a snow-covered field. The opposition proved superior but the Aggies must be given due recognition for doing their share to make it a good game.
