National Honor Society

The year 1945 will always be remembered as an eventful one in many respects, but above all it will be remembered as the year the Northwest School received its charter to the National Honor Society.

The National Honor Society is an organization acknowledging students who have a high scholastic record, good character, capability of leadership, and serve their school to the best of their ability.

On December 14, 1945, a group of members of the Society from Central High School of Crookston conducted the initiation at the Northwest School. The ceremony consisted of displaying the emblem of the society, which is the Key Stone and the Flaming Torch. The students of Central explained the responsibility of the members, and presented each new member with a small emblem in the form of a pin. The students signed the charter, gave the pledge and were made members of the society.

Hereafter at the close of each school year candidates will be chosen by the society. The faculty and students will vote upon them individually and by fulfilling the requirements they will become members. Those becoming members this year were: Gladys Auer, Geneva Iverson, Doris Krogstad, Jack Blom, Kenneth Miller, Gerhard Ross, Peter Schirrick, and Ruth Norum.

Being chosen a member of the National Honor Society is the highest honor that can be given by the Northwest School. It is a goal that each and every student should strive for, and upon reaching it can feel that he has made a success of his years here at the Northwest School.
