The members of the National Honor Society believe that high school prepares students for happier and more efficient living after school days; they also realize that the period spent in school offers many opportunities for practicing what they learn. For these reasons each member strives to put his heart and soul into regular class work and also into the extra school activities. Each strives to develop into the finest possible individual and to give the highest type of service to the Northwest School. Through work and play they seek to attain Scholarship, Leadership, Character, and Service.
