Since debating has traditionally been a means of examining both sides of a question, the topic this year has provided an opportunity for fair-minded study of an important national issue.

The 1947-48 National High School League debate question is Resolved: That the Federal Government should require compulsory arbitration of labor disputes in all basic American industries. The problem of industrial peace is one which raises violent prejudices, but through open-minded and serious examination of all the issues involved, the squad has achieved a clearer understanding of labor and management relations.

From the members of the squad, one team will be chosen to represent the Northwest School at Morris, and one will defend the Aggies' honor in a debate with a West Central team at Crookston.
