

Alvey M. Pilkey

In the poultry division of the livestock department we find jovial and reliable Mr. Alvey M. Pilkey. Mr. Pilkey, who has a keen interest in his students, shows no partiality to any class. He accomplishes this feat by telling all classes the same jokes. Aside from his creditable work in the field of poultry, he personally likes to putter around in the garden, especially with his raspberries.

Julia Shea

While most of the faculty members are primarily concerned with feeding the students' minds once a day, Miss Julia Shea has the tremendous job of satisfying the ravenous appetites of 400 students three times a day. This task requires all the determination and energy which her Irish ancestors bequeathed her.

Theodore Pulkrabek

Surely the veterans have in Mr. Theodore Pulkrabek one of the best veterans' co-ordinators they could ever have. Good humored and friendly Mr. Pulkrabek gives his utmost in teaching the veterans better methods of farming. Mr. Pulkrabek is a familiar figure on the campus and is a friend of all, freshman through advanced. During the summer, much of his attention is focused on his own farm and farm work.

Harry W. Soderburg

In his welding, blacksmithing, and farm shop classes, Mr. Harry W. Soderburg likes to see that his students get as much out of the courses as he is capable of giving them by group work and personal attention. The friendly nature of Mr. Soderburg has won for him the admiration, respect, and friendship of students and faculty alike.
