

HOME MANAGEMENT

THE HOME EC WAY

Struggling under a load of suitcases, radios, books, and other vital equipment, our group destined for ten busy days in home management eagerly trudged up the stairs of the home economics building one Wednesday afternoon. For this period we give up our accommodations in the New Dormitory and the Dining Hall and take care of ourselves under the watchful and helpful eyes of Miss Retta Bede.

We were all a little nervous at dinner the first night. Most of us didn't know just exactly what to do. The manager, who acted as host, was the most nervous. The assistant manager acted as hostess; she poured the tea or coffee at each meal. Each other member of the group had special duties.

Everything went well for a couple of days until one morning we slept a little late. What a scramble to get breakfast ready on time! We were putting the finishing touches on the table when one of the girls discovered we had forgotten to put in the coffee. It took only a few minutes to make the coffee again and soon we sat down to the table.

Our fanciest meal was prepared the night we invited five boys up to dinner. The assistant manager greeted the boys and entertained them until we were ready to eat. Everything went well and we didn't forget the coffee this time.

After our ten days in home management were over, we turned over our duties and fun to the in-coming group. The experience we gained here is comparable to many college home management programs and we all felt the time spent here was very well worthwhile.

Make mine crisp

Dinner at 5:30

Before breakfast routine

At the end of a perfect day

