

Now, boys, this is a basketball.

Mr. Anderson gives pointers to some of his C-Squad.

Aggie basketeers soar through a successful season.

The Northwest School's basketball team has had one of the most successful seasons as far as schedule, improvement with each succeeding game, and victories are concerned. The squad this year made a fine showing against the best teams in this section of the state.

The loyal fans who followed the Aggie team this year are pleased with the type of entertaining ball the boys have played. The team used a fast break style of play, coupled with a good, slow-breaking, screening offense when the situation called for this type of play.

The boys played the pressing style of man-to-man defense to a good advantage, and used a tight zone defense whenever they ran up against a team of fast drivers.

Since the boys representing the Northwest School in basketball this year were good trainers, they had an abundance of speed and stamina. This group of boys made a very favorable impression wherever they played because of their good sportsmanship, well balanced attack, and team play.
