The Northwest Aggie Rouser

The "Rouser" is well known to the students as the campus newspaper, and to be called this it must be informative. In order to keep our students up to date on school events the staff has to be quite large, and many extra hours must be spent by everyone to check through every article for content and value.

After each paper is sent to press and students have gotten their copies the English department sends a corrected copy back to the advisor.

The advisor for the school paper is Conrad Kvamme, who was formerly an assistant county agent in Norman County.

Elna Krueger is this year's editor and her co-editors are Sylvia Magsam, and Shirley Piker. Sometimes it is these people who get all the praise, but somehow this year the people working as typists, proof readers, and reporters have been running so much about the campus that you just can't help but notice them, especially so when they ask us about strange words we don't know, and then when the paper comes out our answer is published.
