

We Acquire Skills for Later Life

The industrial arts training in our school includes a well equipped woodworking shop, where boys can learn many practical skills and how to apply what they learn. Some of the boys apply their skills in building brooder houses or hog houses that can be used at the experimental station, while others build projects that can be used at home.

Not only is Mr. Menzhuber the teacher of carpentry classes and the advisor for Carpentry Club, but he also seems to have a certain charm with some of the young ladies on campus who have signed up for his mechanical drawing class.
