

There must be a hint of a test in the air because the seniors aren't usually that interested in their lessons. It looks like Mr. Anderson isn't prepared for this one, either.

Mr. Anderson seems to enjoy being the arbitrator in our debates on vital issues. When the debate begins to lag, he inserts a remark which stimulates an argument.

We Study American Living in Social

In no other class are we offered such a great opportunity to understand our duties as American citizens. The topics range from the use of leisure time, to our responsibilities concerning our government, which deals with understanding better the role of our government and its policies.
