Pre-season practice started as usual with five returning lettermen and a number of promising underclassmen to form what looked like a good squad.

The team, after the first game, noticed that they needed experience and a greater feeling of the gridiron badly, if they were to have a successful season.

Due to the injury of some key players the squad was hurt considerably. Thus the squad went into a two game slump. By Homecoming their spirit was rising to the point that at the last home game they challenged the opposition to a tough battle ending in a victory of 27-6.
