Freshman Learn Fast

When we first came to Aggie land as freshmen, we learned very quickly to stay away from the upperclassmen who were always ready to confuse freshmen. Their chief source of amusement was when they could give us a "bum steer" as to the location of our classes, which was not difficult since most of our classes are scattered all over campus. Some poor confused freshmen would often find that the seniors would send them to some of the most remote and terrifying places. It has been rumored that some freshmen were seen coming up from the steam tunnel manholes, while others were seen making an exit from Mr. Beresford's root cellar with looks of terror on their little red faces. However, after a week of these pranks, most of us learned the ropes and were well educated in the diabolical plots of the upperclassmen.
