

Social Studies

It is the responsibility of every American citizen to understand how his government functions so that he will become a responsible citizen. In our studies of government, we have learned about problems that have directly or indirectly resulted in the success or failure of the American people and our government. Perhaps this has been brought more to our attention since the assassination of our President, John F. Kennedy, who died carrying out the desires of the people he represented and the principles of democracy that we hold to be true and dear.
