

Aggie Board

The Aggie Board is the hard working group of students who burn the midnight oil every night until the deadline is reached. Working on the "Aggie" requires some sacrifice. Time is spent working when we should be studying. As the deadline draws nearer, the work is intensified and everyone works harder. It doesn't seem as though we are going to make it, but we finally get it done and everyone looks forward to spring when we receive our annuals. All who worked on the annual have a sense of accomplishment in leafing through the annual that he or she helped produce.

It looks like the editors of the "Aggie," Sidney Stivland, Phyllis Payne and Conrad Larson are busy with those finishing touches.
