

Food Service Program Is New Division

Mrs. Strand lectures informally to a quartet enrolled in Foods. The future cooks are Pamela Bearden, Cheryl Wood, Janet Sax, and Linda Moen.

Eating is the favorite sport of Americans and has made the food service industry the fourth largest in the country. Tech's program in Food Service Administration, initiated this year, is designed to prepare students for supervisory positions requiring special skills and knowledge of food, business, and human relations. The object is to supply tempting rations for this nation of eaters.

The position available to graduates with this training include everything from banquet planners, managerships, and supervisors for airline flight kitchens to food sales and equipment promotion. The course is open to both men and women. The department moved into handsome quarters in the new multi-purpose building at the beginning of spring quarter.

Linda peeps approvingly into one of the new wall ovens.

There are always dishes! No electric dishwasher yet!

Mrs. Robert Strand
Foods Instructor