

Everyone Gets Help, Counsel

Whatever your problem or question, some helpful faculty member who is dedicated to counseling is on the job to aid you. If it's an academic query, your assigned adviser helps find the right answer. Need financial aid? Then see, Mr. Peterson, who will puff his pipe and assist in a fatherly way. Maybe he can put you on work-study, get you a loan, or suggest a scholarship. There are at least six programs of financial help administered by the college. No one needs to drop out of college for financial reasons.

Personal problems? Mr. Mathis can offer good counsel. With his assistance and that of division chairmen and other faculty, you should be able also to make that vital choice, a career for which you are suited. College teaches you to find yourself. But making the effort to get the help you need is up to you. It's here for the asking.

Richard Applequist solves the intricacies of the work-study time sheet with the aid of Mr. Jenson.

The form is complicated, but the results are good. René Baron gets help from Mr. Peterson.

Math puzzlement ends when Gene Dufault goes to see instructor Robert Zimmerman.

