

Ready, Aim, Fire!

"Now hold the rifle steady, take a deep breath, and squeeze the trigger easy." This is familiar advice that advisers Charles Averill and Leon Flancher gave to members of Minnesota Tech's shooting club, the Tech Target Masters, an NRA affiliate. The new group was organized last winter to promote competitive shooting and target practice among students and faculty on campus. Officers are Don Johnson, president, and Sherry Hoeft, secretary-treasurer. More than forty men and women belonged to the club during winter and spring quarters.

Coordinating and directing student activities and recreation at the college is the Activities Committee, working under the direction of Dale Knotek. Interested in starting a new club? An intramural sport? Need to set a time for your next dance? Then this is the group to consult. Biggest responsibility of the committee is the allocation of activity funds from students' fees so that each extra-curricular is properly and adequately financed.

This is the Activities Committee: Mr. Knotek, Dianne Glad, David Behr, LeRoy Luchau, Eugene Dufault, Janice Junjak, Cynthia Greenwood, and John Heppner.
