

Dancing, Eats, Honors, Feats

Just let one tulip stick its nose above the ground and everyone begins thinking of proms, honors banquets, and graduation. With "Stairway to the Stars" as its theme, Tech's dinner-dance this year was held May 17. Good music, attractive decorations, and new clothes made the event a party with a capital P.

In his talk at the Honors Banquet, annually sponsored by the Crookston Chamber of Commerce, Dr. G. T. Mitau, chancellor-elect of Minnesota State Colleges, told his audience of students, faculty, and civic leaders to devote part of their lives to civic responsibility and to building bridges between people, races, and nations. The forgetfulness of man for man is the reason for the problems of today, he declared.

More than a hundred college students were cited at the May 21 dinner because of their achievements and leadership in studies, campus activities, and athletics.

Pretty girls captivated many a roving eye as they glided through the figures of the grand march.

The Grand March, led by Dr. and Mrs. Sahlstrom, was fun, as usual.
