

Programs provide something for all

Variety spiced the entertainment offerings for students this year. Provided by the Concerts and Lectures Committee, the fare included folk singers, dancers, art exhibits, tops in classical music, and drama. Those interested could also attend concerts scheduled by the city Civic Music League. A Crookston Fine Arts Festival in February brought the Minnesota Symphony Orchestra here for a performance and sponsored numerous collections of art and crafts for viewing. 1968-69 was a year of enrichment for those seeking culture or amusement.

Joey Edmunds, guitarist and folk singer, opened Tech's entertainment program early in the fall quarter.

A collection of photographic reproductions of famous works of art, which was exhibited in the library, interests Clayton Rawhouser.

Students enjoyed visiting the Minneapolis Institute of Arts Artmobile when it was on campus in November. The gentleman in charge was Michael Oker.

The famous Three D's, Dick, Denise and Duane, entertained an appreciative audience with songs and witty comment in October.
