

The college offered students a variety of interesting fare this year. Entertainment included speakers, actors, singers, instrumentalists, and even the Minnesota Symphony. Everyone also had tickets to attend the Crookston Artist Series, courtesy of the college. The weekly coffee house in the Inn was an innovation that attracted large crowds. There were also movies on Sunday evenings and the usual series of foreign films sponsored by the Faculty Women's Club.
