

David A. Stoppel, PhD.
Division Chairman

Expanding Horizons Aim of Gen. Ed.

College isn't just "learning to make a living", even though everyone has to do that. It's also broadening oneself intellectually for intelligent citizenship and social participation. These are two of the functions of the general education division, which offers the student both required and elective subjects in social studies, communication skills, humanities, science, and mathematics. The fringe benefit comes because the more these branches of knowledge are mastered, the better job one does in mastering himself and the major field in which he plans to work.

Donald Bergquist, M.E.
Communications

Filmore Engelman, B.S.
Psychology

Mary Engelman, M.S.
Physical Education, Counselor