Ag Majors Learn Judging Skills

You can appraise the usefulness, beauty, and value of everything from art to cats. The men registered in some ag courses learn to judge and grade such things as the conformation of animals and the purity of grain seeds. The Crops Judging Team from the college took fifth in the national and international contests, competing with groups from four year colleges. The Livestock Judges also took a fifth spot in a national meet in Denver, working with beef, swine, horses, and sheep.

A visit to the Morris campus facilities gave these men another slant on livestock care and appraisal.

Competing in the National Collegiate Crops Judging Contest in Kansas City and the international competition in Chicago were five students coached by Charles Habstritt: Nathan Redland, Steve Gorentz, Steve Smith, Elmer Miranowski, and Jim Gondringer.
