

"Well received," drama group sees 2nd year

Director Al Filipi supervises make-up application before performance of the fall play "A Company of Wayward Saints."

UMC's drama group, the Trojan Players, began their second year at UMC with "A Company of Wayward Saints." the play was presented during an Italian dinner organized by an HRI seminar class. The play told the story of man's life and his relations to the people around him.

Acclaimed as "the best performance of the Trojan Players" was the winter quarter performance of "Dark of the Moon." Based on the Ballad of Barbra Allen, it dealt with the superstitions of the Tennessee mountain people in the early 1900's.

Final production of the year was "Last of the Red Hot Lovers", a play by Neil Simon. The action centered around a married man looking for excitement through extramarital affairs. His three attempts at finding a lover put him in some ridiculous situations and made for humorous entertainment.

"Dark of the Moon", a play based on the Ballad of Barbra Allen, was presented Winter Quarter.
