

"BUTTERFLIES ARE FREE"

The humorous yet touching story of a young blind man's search for independence and love was the theme of "Butterflies Are Free". An overprotective mother whose concern to protect her son leads to confrontation. His affair with a flighty young actress who is afraid of entanglements lead to heartbreak and the tender reunion.

Above: Reunion and a new beginning.

"I look just like Elizabeth Taylor, especially if you can't see."

Advisor, Alice Moorhead and Director, Al Filipi pose with cast and custodian following final performance.
