

"The business division offers 22 programs of study ranging from business computer systems to court reporting, from fashion merchandising to word processing, or from accounting to retail management. Professional, well-trained faculty prepare students with the knowledge, skills, and attitudes necessary for successful mid-management careers in business.

Sam K. Christ

Top row from left: Roger Aspevig, assistant professor, business; Judy Barrett, teaching specialist data processing, accounting; Adolph Beich, associate professor, secretarial; Judy Brandwick, senior data entry operator; Sue Brorson, instructor, fashion merchandising, marketing; Marie Fournier, data processing technician; Donald MacGregor, assistant professor and director computer services; William Paradise, assistant professor, accounting; Ella Strand, assistant professor, fashion merchandising; Arlene Tahrán, secretary, business division; and Twyla Treanor, instructor, court reporting.

